Reinterpreting the seven deadly sins, discussing the unspoken desires, unique thoughts, and pursuits of women.

Written by seven female authors: Superbia, Invidia, Ira, Acedia, Avaritia, Gula, Luxuria. These are seven stories about everyday human nature. They break away from the traditional male-centric, masculine writing and shatter the patriarchal perspective that has existed throughout history. They offer a fresh perspective on seven raw human desires. Here, we don't discuss faith; we purely delve into the chronicles of the female era.

This book provides a rare glimpse into Taipei's tea houses—a euphemism for establishments where women do more than serve tea. Shine Lee interviewed twelve women who worked as hostesses or sex workers in the red-light district. Late in life, they found hope at the Pearl Family Garden Women's Center.
